

Illinois Senator Martin Sandoval voted on a measure recently that will ensure the construction season in Illinois starts off without a hitch.

House Bill 190, now law, was a necessary component that will ensure the continuation of capital projects that have been ongoing for years. A major component of the legislation was funding to continue road and bridge repairs across Illinois.

“These projects not only strengthen our state’s infrastructure, but also create jobs ensuring we are able to put Illinoisans back to work,” said Sandoval, Chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee.
